Prussia Victorious over Austria.

European dates as late as the 6th inst., are received, and the war news is of a highly important and decisive character. The scene of the most active hostilities had been transferred from Venetia to Bohemia. The grand Prussian and Austrian armies had fought a succession of tremendous battles at Nachod and Lutzen. Of course too much reliance must not be placed upon reports emanating from the Cabinets of Berlin or Vienna. Our own experience is fresh of the tendency to magnify issues and dejects on the part of the contestants. We must look to English or French correspondents for the most correct as well as impartial accounts.

But from all these sources of information, the confessions of Field Marshal Benedek of defeat, the exultant dispatches of the Crown Prince to Berlin, the letters of Russell to the London Times and M. Vilbert to the Paris Sheets, there can be no doubt that the Prussians have achieved two of the most brilliant victories on record. At the battle of Nachod about 90,000 men were on the field, on both sides. The battle raged from nine and a half o'clock in the morning until three o'clock in the afternoon. The Austrians lost six guns, flags and standards, 2,000 prisoners, and as many more were placed hors de combat. The Austrian artillery was no match for the Prussian guns. The needless game of the Prussian infantry, terrible execution. The Prussian cavalry won its spurs that day, against this much vaunted arm of the Austrian service.

The Austrians were finally pushed into a disastrous retreat. This offensive was maintained by the Prussians; indeed their attack took the enemy completely by surprise. They executed a very daring flank movement, moving their immense force, material and supplies through mountain defiles, which presented unbounded facilities to the Austrians to strike, intercept or包围 them. But of this masterly expedition they were professedly ignorant, until the Prussian lancers, who advanced at the head of the columns as scouts, galloped upon the plateau where they were established. The moral effect of this battle may be seen in the one which followed about a week later. The Prussians breached fresh hope, courage and determination, and the Austrians were demoralized, if not disorganized by their previous disasters. In the battle of Lutzen the Prussians took 11,000 Austrian prisoners. There were great losses in killed and wounded and the Austrians sent a flag of truce to the enemy. No details of the battle have yet been received. A strong confidence seems to prevail of the speedy termination of hostilities. The friendly intervention of France, which Prussia at first favored, and Austria repelled, it is said Austria is now anxious to secure, while Prussia manifests some reluctance in the pursuit. Austria now proposes to cede Venetia to Napoleon, which will restore her to the family of Italian States. Of the terms which the haughty ambition of Bismarck, which has been crowned with such extraordinary success, will now demand, we are not advised, but we may rest assured that they will be of a very substantial character.

The Harrisburg Telegraph adds nothing to its reputation by attempting to belittle up the Pettis nomination for Congress. The Telegraph is in the interest of Simon Cameron for Senator, and hence desires the success of his sympathizer Mr. Finney having openly avowed his preference for Gov. Curtin in that position, of course inclined to the Telegraph. The editor of that paper therefore misrepresents all the important facts connected with our Congressional cause, and concludes his article as follows:

Mr. Finney has already received a liberal share of offices from the citizens of Crawford county, and can well afford to stand aside for more active, young and reliable Republicans. We hope, therefore, that Mr. Pettis will receive a unanimous nomination in the Twenty-first District.

The idea of presenting Pettis as a "reliable Republican" may be tolerated where his political record is unknown. But it is folly to invite a comparison of the political "Jumping Jack" who has held a half dozen regular nominations (including that of Governor Curtin), against such an energetic, devoted and unwavering Republican as Barwin A. Finney. The Telegraph is advised to attend to its own business, instead of making itself ridiculous by attempting to run the politics of this country.

Dan Rice's Circus and Menagerie exhibited here yesterday, and the day and evening performances were attended by thousands of people. The fencers and their long-tailed horses congregated at an early hour and completely filled the burn district opposite the postoffice. Such another multitude has not been witnessed since the parade of the Antiques and Horribles on the 4th of July. The "show" was all that was advertised, and Dan was in his happy and most effective vein. He appeared in his ring costume for the first time in several months, and was to all purposes as joyful, jocund and jolly as "in days long gone." Long may he wave.

THE PENNSYLVANIA RESERVES.—A movement is on foot for the establishment of a permanent organization for the division of Pennsylvania Reserves which did such good service during the late war, and was for some time under the immediate command of General Mende. A convention is to be held at Lancaster, Pa., on the 14th of September, to consist of three delegates from each regiment.

NOT MUCHLY.—A. Kelley & Co., of Chicago, "take the liberty," as they say, of sending us a half column advertisement of a $500,000 lottery scheme, and request us to put it in the Herald and take our pay in Prize Tickets. This is the most impudent proposition that ever originated outside of Pittsfield. By whomsoever will ask us to get a purse for a Prize Fight and take our share of the profit in hard knocks.

THE NEW YORK EXPRESS train on the A. & G. W. R. which should have left Corry at 3:30 a.m., yesterday, was detained at Cambria by the engine jumping the track. No person was hurt, and the train arrived at Corry at 7:15. The passengers looked as though they had not enjoyed their compulsory sojourn of a few hours "betwixt connections."

A SPARKING affair of a serious character occurred in the Western Penitentiary on Saturday last. A prisoner named Mackrell, attempted to take the life of the Superintendent in revenge for some real or imaginary offence, and inflicted upon him three stabs with a sharp knife, causing severe, if not fatal injuries.

Our Titusville readers will find the MORNING HERALD for sale at the news rooms of Morris, Hanley & Lapham, every morning on the arrival of the train from Princeton. These gentlemen are our sole agents at Titusville, and will furnish the HERALD to subscribers by the week, month or year.

The appointment of Mr. Armstrong, as manager of the Western Union Telegraph at Corry, has been revoked, and Mr. A. will remain in Titusville. The intelligence will be gratifying to his acquaintances and friends in this city.

BOY PARK.—We have an interesting communication from Boy Park, which will appear to-morrow.

Street Improvements.

Editor's Morning Herald: Before the reconstruction of West Spring street is commenced, I would suggest to the Street Committee some alterations in the plans which they adopted for East Spring and Diamond streets. In the judgment of many of our citizens and tax-payers, the road-bed and gutters would have been greatly improved by graduating the slope from the crown to the curb. In the plan adopted it is impossible to drive a vehicle close to the curb, and the grade is so steep from the centre that there is much danger of overturning. This defect would be wholly remedied by making the gutter at the curb, and graduating the road-bed from the line of the curb to the street centre. As it is, the gutter is made to slope in both directions and hence contracts the street and causes a very steep ascent. These suggestions are thrown out at the request of property holders on West Spring street, who desire that the plans of the improvement should be altered in such a manner as to obviate the effects which are so apparent in Diamond and East Spring streets.

TAX PAYER.

Editor's Morning Herald:

Will you please inform those interested in our street improvement why the Committee on Streets, Street Commissioners, &c., have adopted such an ill-advised, inconvenient form of gutter, as are more properly termed ditch, instead of the usual form of gutter invariably used in larger cities? It certainly cannot be necessary to facilitate surface drainage, as we have not a single street in our town in which the ordinary gutter would not afford ample and complete drainage. Then why is this "ditch" so constructed as to strike the observer that it is made as a barrier to the approach of the sidewalk against vehicles of every kind. Have our hotel keepers and others living on streets favored by such improvement, got to invent and construct some sort of a projecting scaffold or horse-block to enable ladies to get safely to or from the sidewalk into or out of a carriage? Gentlemen are supposed to have in this country high topped mud boots to enable them to perform such afeat without great damage; but for ladies some means must be invented to get them over this "bad ditch," or the Street Committee, Commissioners, &c., will find themselves in very bad favor with the fair sex. I have heard the matter pretty thoroughly discussed by our citizens, but none seem able to give a single good reason to justify such a nuisance, but several strong reasons against it.

I am told that in a small town not far distant where this style of gutter has been adopted the property owners have been obliged to bridge over the gutters. This it strikes me would be bad for the health of our town, were we driven to the same expedient. They executed a very daring move, moving their immense force, material and supplies through mountain defiles, which presented unbounded facilities to the Austrians to strike, intercept or包围 them. But of this masterly expedition they were professedly ignorant, until the Prussian lancers, who advanced at the head of the columns as scouts, galloped upon the plateau where they were established. Editor's Morning Herald:

We notice in the new portion of East Spring and Diamond streets, that a novel species of gutter has been adopted, which detracts both from the appearance and utility of the street. Instead of following the natural curve of the street to form the gutter, coming within six or seven inches of the top of the curb, as is the case in all large cities, the gutter is formed in a curve of itself, in such a manner, and at such an angle, that carriages are liable to upset in coming up to the sidewalk. We are surprised at this form of gutter being adopted, as it not only detracts from the beauty and symmetry of the street, but, practically speaking, a nuisance. Feeling assured that you will use your valuable columns to aid in rectifying this mistake, I will append myself, yours truly,

Editor's Morning Herald:

We notice in the new portion of East Spring and Diamond streets, that a novel species of gutter has been adopted, which detracts both from the appearance and utility of the street. Instead of following the natural curve of the street to form the gutter, coming within six or seven inches of the top of the curb, as is the case in all large cities, the gutter is formed in a curve of itself, in such a manner, and at such an angle, that carriages are liable to upset in coming up to the sidewalk. We are surprised at this form of gutter being adopted, as it not only detracts from the beauty and symmetry of the street, but, practically speaking, a nuisance. Feeling assured that you will use your valuable columns to aid in rectifying this mistake, I will append myself, yours truly,

WELL-WISHER.

Our Meadville Letter.

MEADVILLE, July 10th.

Editor's Morning Herald:

News are scarce at the enemy seat. It is so confounded that accidents are postponed, business is dull, breathing an exertion, and paralyzing a penality. How ill I say! that faintly expresses it. The sun is a brass ball of fire; the streets heated brick-kilns; houses ovens; and women are roasting pheasants, baked and browned, in the shade. Passing up the run over rough roads we pass the Craftsmen's well; this has been a good flowing well, but has done little or nothing since it ceased flowing. The Cornelia well is higher up the hill on the right, and was a very good flowing well, but has done little or nothing since it ceased flowing. The Miller well is higher up the hill on the left, and was a good flowing well, but has done little or nothing since it ceased flowing.

Now we come to the first new well, called the Little Barringer, owned principally by J. F. F. Don, and three Doney boys; they commenced testing about the first of June with a fine show, but not having satisfied with the position of the tubing, it was drawn and the well closed, stone which it has been steadily leaking, and is estimated to be about 50 barrels per day.

Now we come to the second new well, called the Noble well, which was opened by the Noble family,

ALL ABOUT.

The outfit of Percival, is well shown in the window on Monday, while laborers were shoveling out live coals from a cellar, masses were laying bricks within a few feet. One tradesman who was burned out had opened a furnace, which was burning red hot, and is driving a scow-boat in a woodshed, and is driving a scow-boat.
